Suavecito: Pete Adame, Tony Adame, and Jason Venable (Business)
Suavecito was founded by Pete Adame, Jason Venable, and Tony Adame, who were born and raised in Santa Ana, California to Mexican immigrants in a low-income community.

In 2009, the founders turned their hobby of making musk-scented hair pomade into a business. With a cult barbershop following and relentless road trips selling jars of pomade from the trunk at car shows, tattoo conventions and music festivals all over the country, Suavecito became a worldwide sensation. The company has since expanded far beyond pomade, including cosmetics, apparel, toys, and much more.

All three founders have gone on to reinvest in Santa Ana, forming multiple other local companies and prioritizing hiring local Santaneros. Suavecito has been recognized multiple times by the City of Santa Ana and the US Congress for community contributions and philanthropy focused on youth leadership and immigration support services.
